56. Please include any other examples of policy coherence activities:

- Coordination of the National Anti-Corruption Expert Group (GNECC, for its Spanish acronym). Informal group formed by public entities to share information and coordinate about different national and international anti-corruption activities.
- The SUBREI became a member of UNCAC Anti-Corruption Alliance. This Alliance is public-private initiative with the objective of implementing the UNCAC. SUBREI became a member with the objective to have policy coherence and create synergies in the implementation of the UNCAC and OECD Anti-Bribery Convention and OECD Guidelines (especially its Chapter 7).
- Participation of the SUBREI in two Clean Production Agreements (APL) as member of its Coordination Committee. An APL is an agreement entered into among a business sector, companies and public agencies, with the objective of implementing specific goals and actions aimed at achieving clean production and serving as a management tool to improve different matters addressed by the agreement related to sustainability. With SUBREI as member of the Coordination Committee of two APLs, it takes steps to ensure policy coherence with the OECD Guidelines.
- Creation of a Responsible Business Conduct Sub-Group in the Pacific Alliance. The objective to discuss among its country-members the OECD Guidelines and its implementation and thus enhance the contribution of multinational companies to sustainable development.

Additional comments on the section Policy Coherence:

G. Challenges

57. Has the NCP faced any particular challenge(s) it would like to highlight this year?

- High number of specific instances.
- Complex specific instances.
- High workload because of different requests from the OECD Secretariat (e.g., reports, meetings, comments of documents, questionnaire).
- The NCP and its staff are responsible for different issues. The handling of the specific instances; the coordination of its advisory Committees, for the promotion of responsible business conduct; the participation of other public-private instances to raise awareness and promote responsible conduct in companies; the coordination of the OECD Anti-Bribery Convention (follow-up of recommendations, coordination of the National Group of Experts against Corruption [GNECC], participation in meetings, reports); the participation in the UNAC Anti-Corruption Alliance; the participation in the implementation of actions committed within the the framework of the National Human Rights Plan and the National Action Plan on Human Rights and Business, among other tasks.

Additional comments on the section Challenges:

It is important to consider that a high number of requests from different stakeholders, including the Secretariat of the OECD, can distract the NCP from its main duties, in particular the handling of specific instances. This should be considered by all the stakeholders involved, so that the NCP has time to implement and develop improvements in its work.
